

2024 IMPACT REPORT

FEEDING
SOUTHWEST
VIRGINIA

Blue Ridge
AREA
FOOD BANK

CAPITAL AREA
FOOD BANK

FREDERICKSBURG
REGIONAL FOOD BANK

VIRGINIA PENINSULA
Foodbank

FEED
MORE

Foodbank
of Southeastern Virginia
and the Eastern Shore

Together, We're Improving Food Security for Virginia

All people need nutritious food to thrive. While Virginians work hard to provide for themselves and their families, approximately 964,000 people—that's one in 9 Virginians—are still facing hunger. As food prices and other household expenses remain high, the Federation of Virginia Food Banks led the collaborative effort to end hunger in the Commonwealth.

175 million
pounds

of food distributed
to neighbors

600,000
neighbors

64 million
pounds

of fruits & vegetables
distributed to neighbors

$7+ million
in grants

enabled for food banks

Nearly 2 million pounds sourced from 65 local agricultural partners through Farms

to Food Banks initiative

1,800+ food pantries

and distribution sites like
schools and clinics

Supporting Families Through the Food Pharmacy

Feeding Southwest Virginia (Salem, VA)

This clinician treats patients at Mount Rogers Community Services in Southwest Virginia. She cares for a grandparent in his 80s who is the guardian for his teenage grandchild. As a retiree, food insecurity is a constant challenge, especially in their remote location.

Through the Food Pharmacy program with Feeding Southwest Virginia, the clinic provides 110 medically tailored food boxes each month. "The healthy food boxes have been a lifeline for this family," she shared. "They help stretch their budget when unexpected expenses, like a broken water heater, arise. Without them, they'd have no other options."

The grandchild has also embraced the opportunity to cook using the ingredients provided. "Learning to prepare meals has given the teen a sense of pride and a valuable life skill," the clinician explained. Using resources provided by the Food Pharmacy, this family has found stability, health, and hope in the face of significant challenges.

More Than Hunger: Building Partnerships to Improve Health Equity

A food pharmacy guest brings healthy food home. (Blue Ridge Area Food Bank, Verona)

Food Pharmacy

Food Pharmacies provide healthy groceries to food-insecure patients in a clinical setting.

Our 84 food pharmacies served about 3,500 patients monthly, a 45% increase from 2023.

42,000 Patients

Healthy Pantry Initiative (HPI)

HPI supports expansion of 20 best practices through assessment, training, and grants.

This we year, we created 14 training courses for the Virginia Learning Center, piloted with 23 pantries, and awarded $120,000 in grants.

520 Pantries

The Power of Food As Medicine

As our statewide health equity strategy enters its fourth year, 'Food Is Medicine' initiatives continue to reach more neighbors living with chronic disease. We prioritize interventions with tailored options to meet neighbors where they are, from home delivery to culturally-preferred foods to direct connection with other service providers.

SNAP (Food Stamp) Outreach

The Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (SNAP) provides monthly benefits make groceries more affordable, improving food security and health.

Our network increased SNAP applications by 10% this year. We advocate for policy changes like telephonic signatures and increased minimum benefit for older adults, which ease participation for homebound, rural, and senior households.

2,149 Applications

Referrals & Case Management

Food banks, healthcare, and other nonprofit and public services use the Unite Us platform to connect neighbors with essential services in one place.

Now all seven food banks have joined Unite Us and more than doubled completed referrals.

2,764 Referrals

2024 Highlight: Virginia Food is Medicine Summit

Hosted by the Federation in March 2024, leaders from across Virginia gathered in Richmond to advance the Food is Medicine movement. Advocates, providers, and public health professionals collaborated to develop solutions for nutrition insecurity. Over the two-day event, 200+ participants joined us to pursue a healthier, food-secure Virginia with topics like:

- Partnerships to Reach Underserved Populations
- Connecting Health and Social Care - A Path Toward Health Equity
- The Intersection of Food is Medicine, Food Justice, and Food Systems

from left: Rickeya Feggans, Feeding America; Meaghan Butler, Federation of Virginia Food Banks; Kofi Essel, Elevance Health; Eddie Oliver, Federation of Virginia Food Banks

Advocating for a Hunger-Free Virginia

Food access advocates at the Virginia Food for Virginia Families Reception

The Federation advanced food access policy through advocacy and partnerships, securing a seat on the newly-formed Virginia Commission to End Hunger. As leaders of the cross-sector Virginia Food Access Coalition, we work with more than 100 advocates to build support for legislation that will:

- increase the minimum SNAP benefit for adults age 60+ from $23 to $50 per month
- expand Medicaid nutrition services
- support college food pantries
- improve access to federal nutrition programs

This year, we will continue to engage Virginia’s Congressional delegation to protect SNAP benefits and strengthen the federal commodity programs in the Farm Bill.

SCAN HERE
to sign up for
advocacy alerts

We are grateful to our many partners for their support this year!

Join the movement with Virginia’s food banks at vafoodbanks.org

Dear Friends and Supporters,

2024 has been a year of two stories: one of tremendous progress for our network, but also one of adversity for the communities we serve. After years of high inflation and recent cuts to government assistance programs, families are spending more and more of their limited budgets at the grocery store. Food prices are 25% more than they were five years ago. This has contributed to the highest sustained levels of demand ever seen by our food banks. To fill the gaps, we are collectively spending three times more money on food than we did in 2019.

More than ever, it is clear that the deck is stacked against low-income and working people. While more than 900,000 Virginians struggle with food insecurity, even more are one missed paycheck or emergency expense away from hardship. The Federation will continue to stand with our neighbors and partners, working toward a future where all communities have access to enough nutritious food at all times. It’s ambitious, but I know it’s achievable if we all play our part.

With gratitude,

Eddie Oliver
Executive Director